Demystifying Equity, Diversity, and Inclusion (EDI): Information Session

Join us for an information session on the basics of EDI and its interrelation to human rights and legislative obligations.

Over the last three years and counting, there has been a sense of urgency in response to what's happened and what's been happening with particular respect to the escalation of anti-Black, anti-Indigenous, and anti-Asian violence; the further marginalization of persons with disabilities; and the increasing displacement of people who are insecurely housed or unhoused.

In response, many organizations have started to consider or have furthered their EDI work. However, there are often misconceptions about EDI and an oversight that EDI is interconnected to human rights, which can have negative impacts on an organization.

Facilitator: Jennifer Mak, of J. Mak Consulting, is a Human Rights and Equity Strategist. Her consultancy focuses on helping organizations build and maintain healthy work environments that are free from discrimination, harassment, and violence by using an intersectional, anti-oppression approach to embed human rights, equity, inclusion, and accessibility in their systems, structures, policies, procedures, processes, and practices.
